

OFFENBACH MELODY HEARD AT CENTURY

"The Tales of Hoffmann" Produced by Aborn Company
With Great Success.

AUDIENCE GIVES FAVOR

New Singers Appear in Familiar Work, Which Is Sung in English.

Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann" was produced at the Century Opera House last evening in the presence of another of those large and enthusiastic assemblies which have welcomed each of its predecessors in the still young season of the enterprise.

If there had been any doubt about the success of the fantastic French opera-house in its new abode it vanished swiftly at the close of the first act, when long and loud applause greeted the singers and singing actors. The mood of the audience once established remained and the performance went forward to its close with unceasing approval.

It is more than thirty years ago that this opera, "Les Contes d'Hoffmann," was first made known to New Yorkers by one of Maurice Grau's opera bouffe companies. It had no popularity at that time and soon was laid away. In recent years, however, it has found much favor in Germany and had also some successful revivals in France.

Doubtless for these reasons Oscar Hammerstein, seeking for novelties to put upon the stage of his Manhattan Opera House, took up the forgotten work. He revived it on November 14, 1907, and it was received with delight. The cast was by no means perfect; Renaud, Dalmores and Gilbert carried the burden on their shoulders. The women were all unequal to their tasks. But the acting of the three men and the charm of the music were sufficient to establish the opera in favor.

Nearly All American Singers.

After the expatriation of Mr. Hammerstein the opera passed into the repository of the Philadelphia-Chicago company, which introduced it to the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House on February 14, 1911. Dalmores and Renaud still carried the greater part of the burden. Now the work has become a feature of the repertoire of a theatre devoted principally to the performance of opera in English, and it was presented last evening chiefly by American singers.

Little has been said in this place about the significance of the employment of English texts at the Century Opera House, up to the present time the language has apparently had no great influence upon the attitude of the public. But it is possible that in a work of this type a clear understanding of the text might be of greater importance.

Last evening it was evident that in some of the comedy scenes the text went for something with the audience, while in the more serious episodes the music claimed larger attention. But this is a matter which must be set aside for the present. The real meaning of the Century Opera House cannot yet be defined. The enterprise has met with abundant public favor and has fairly deserved it. But whether the public has formulated a definite demand for opera in English or not cannot yet be decided.

The presentation of the opera last evening had features of merit not unlike those already noted in the more serious scenes. The musical execution was greater than the dramatic and the general results more agreeable than separate contributions. It is an ancient mathematical axiom that the whole is the sum of its parts, and fairly good whole the form must be created with parts not all of equal value.

The mounting of the opera was by no means the least creditable element of last evening's presentation. The scenery was better than the costumes sufficiently bright and varied and the groupings pleasing to the eye. The chorus has sung better in other works, but it was by no means inferior. The orchestra played with spirit and with some color, and Mr. Nicol conducted generally with skill.

Bardley in Fine Voice.

The most satisfactory single impersonation was that of John Bardley as Hoffmann. His voice is of a pretty quality, quite equal to the demands of Offenbach's music. It is perhaps not necessary to sing so much of the role at half voice, but it is better to do that than to be robust. There was a great deal of singing in Mr. Bardley's style and his Hoffmann will be remembered as one of the season's agreeable disclosures.

A newcomer was Lena Mason as Olympia. This singer has a high voice and a flood of high tones which are not always delightful to the sensitive ear. But on the whole she looked the part, sang the music with the manifest satisfaction of her auditors and acted with the skill of an automaton. Morten Adkins undertook the roles of Spalanzini, Dappertutto and Dr. Miracle, in which Mr. Renaud used to exhibit his extraordinary virtuosity in the art of acting. Mr. Adkins reached no high level of distinction, but made commendable efforts.

Jayne Herbert, another newcomer, was a plump and gracious Winkie, but her singing was not of a high order. Her appearance, Lois Ewell was a good Giulietta and Ivy Scott was the Automata. Francesco Daddi, sole survivor of the original Manhattan cast, appeared as Coppelius. He was as amusing as ever.

The opera will be given in English during the remainder of this week and on Monday evening will be performed in French.

Webster, Thorne Maxwell Conner, Charles Pitt, Alice Gale and Margaret Robinson.

"GREEN BEETLE" IN VAUDEVILLE

"The Green Beetle" was acted first in the vast recesses of the Metropolitan Opera House when the Lambs gave their annual gambol there last spring. Now this two act play, which is the work of John Willard, is on the bill at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. Its excellencies are more easily recognized, although it is by no means sure that its improbabilities are not a little more evident in the smaller frame of a dramatic theatre.

There are color and mystery in the little sketch, and they may compensate for the lack of common sense. Louis Casavant plays the Oriental with the necessary craft and the suppressed power, but his juicy German accent was not convincing as an evidence of his Eastern origin. Madge Voe and May Hopkins were uncommonly comely performers to be found in a vaudeville sketch.

MISS FLORENCE WYETH WEDS.

Daughter of Dr. John A. Wyeth, Bride of Alan Dater McLean.

The wedding of Miss Florence Sims Wyeth, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Wyeth, to Alan Dater McLean, son of the late George Hamilton McLean, took place yesterday afternoon in the church of St. Thomas's Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stiles, rector of the church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Owen of this city.

After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, 244 Lexington avenue. Mr. and Mrs. McLean sailed for Europe to-day. The wedding party will pass some time at a villa in Italy and on their return will live in Morristown, N. J.

Canfield-Yocum.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Sept. 30.—The marriage of Miss Martha Mears Yocum, daughter of the late Congressman Seth H. Yocum, of Belmont, Pa., and Richard Withington Canfield, son of General Superintendent Edward Canfield of the Ontario and Western Railroad, of this city, took place at 6 o'clock this evening at the home of the bride's aunt, Miss Florence Horton on Roberts street, this city.

MISS LAURA WEBB ENGAGED.

Daughter of Frank Egerton Webb to Wed Jorge Andre of Hamburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Egerton Webb of 925 Park avenue are announcing to-day to relatives and intimate friends here and in Europe the engagement of their only daughter, Miss Laura Virginia Webb, to Jorge Andre of Hamburg, Germany.

Miss Webb, who was introduced to society three years ago, is a granddaughter of the late Gen. James Watson Webb and a niece of W. Seward Webb and of Major H. C. Crighton Webb of this city. On her mother's side she is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund D. Randolph of Mount St. Vincent on Hudson and a niece of Mrs. Richard Trimble and Edmund Randolph.

Mr. Andre is a cousin of the late Baron von Andre, who married a sister of Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew. Before coming to New York a year ago he was for several years in Siam, where he established a business for himself. He is an accomplished linguist, speaking fluently German, French, Spanish, Siamese and English. While no date has been set for the wedding it will probably take place this winter in New York.

THE LAMBS ELECT OFFICERS.

No Opposition to Ticket Sets Record of Strife at Reat.

The nominating committee of the Lambs Club met yesterday afternoon and selected the following ticket, which will be voted on at the coming election, in three weeks. Shepherd, William Courtleigh; boy, Bruce MacFar; recording secretary, Holbrook Blinn; corresponding secretary, Hazen Hoyt; treasurer, Nathaniel Canfield; Librarian, Mackey Mackey; and members of the council, George V. Hobart, S. B. Hamberger and Joseph R. Grimmer. It is not likely that there will be an opposition ticket. The selection of the ticket yesterday apparently set at rest rumors that there was some strife in the club. The Lambs some time ago purchased two buildings adjoining the clubrooms on West Forty-fourth street, where it was proposed to build an eighteen-story addition. The older and conservative members of the club have wished to go slowly about erecting the new building. The site acquired cost $200,000, but the club is in excellent condition financially. The more progressive members have wanted action on the new building. It was said that Mr. Grimmer had been selected yesterday to regular ticket an opposition ticket headed by Mr. Courtleigh would be put in the field.

Upon the death of Mrs. Saks the estate goes to her daughter, Mrs. Rebecca Heckheimer and Mrs. Lella S. Meyers, her sons, William A. and Horace A. Saks, and her grandson, Leonard C. Levy, Jr., son of her deceased daughter, Edna. Leonard C. Levy, the son-in-law, got $18,035. Mr. Saks left $25,000 to his wife and two sons to distribute among charitable institutions. The latter concern manufactured all the clothing for three stores of Saks & Co. and was one of the two principal stockholders. The appraisal showed that when Saks & Co. was organized the testator had $300,000 in cash and other assets. Prior to his death he gave all this stock to his two sons and had no interest in the business when he died. Under his will the executors had power to lend Saks & Co. up to $250,000. Mr. Saks held a large interest in the Eugene B. Payer stores, but sold out a few months before his death to his brother-in-law, N. W. Rohr.
